The use of alliteration in the second stanza "land of lost content", "happy highways", "cannot come" artfully echoes this wistfulness, as the aspirated "h" sounds of "happy highways", reflecting the speaker's own futile aspirations to regain the past, give way to the harsh sound of "cannot come".

A Short Analysis of A. E. Housman's "Into my heart an air"

That is the land of lost content, I see it shining plain,
The happy highways where I went
And cannot come again.
XLI In my own shire, if I was sad, Homely comforters I had:
The earth, because my heart was sore,
Sorrowed for the son she bore;
And standing hills, long to remain,
Shared their short-lived comrade's pain.

"The Land of Lost Content" by A.E. Housman
You can never tell where your next long forgotten memory may crop up. In this case it was while watching an episode of "Inspector Lewis" that I heard the familiar words of A.E. Housman, reminding me that in losing track of him as a poet I had created my own "Land of Lost Content."

farmland lost is gone forever, and the continuing loss of the state's best land narrows the options and reduces the resilience of California agriculture. Some California farmland will continue to be lost to urban and other uses in the future.

The narrator, the one who speaks in A Shropshire Lad, identifies the blue hills and their farms and spires as the "land of lost content;" so, though the memories may not be sad in themselves, their lostness is. The content of those memories and experiences cannot be relived, "cannot come again," and the contentment that they gave is lost also.

A Shropshire Lad is a collection of sixty-three poems by the English poet Alfred Edward Housman, published in 1896. After a slow beginning, it rapidly grew in popularity, particularly among young readers. Composers began setting the poems to music less than ten years after their first appearance. Many parodies have also been written that satirise Housman's themes and stylistic characteristics.

And I with earth and nightfall
In converse high would stand,
Late, till the west was ashen
And darkness hard at hand,
And the eye lost the land.
The year might age, and cloudy
The lessening day might close,
But air of other summers
Breathed from beyond the snows,
And I had hope of those.
